

II

Nature's Compensation: Entropy

The [second] law that entropy always increases, holds, I think, the supreme position among the laws of Nature. ... if your theory is found to be against the second law of thermodynamics I can give you no hope; there is nothing for it but to collapse in deepest humiliation.

–Sir Arthur Stanley Eddington, British Astrophysicist (1882–1944)